1. Legislation

Commons second reading of Children and Families Bill. MPs debated the second reading of the Children and Families Bill in the House of Commons on Monday 25 February 2013. The Bill passed without a division and will now be considered by a Public Bill Committee. The Bill seeks to reform legislation relating to adoption and children in care; aspects of the family justice system; children and young people with special educational needs; the Office of the Children's Commissioner for England; statutory rights to leave and pay for parents and adopters; time off work for ante-natal care; and the right to request flexible working.

Succession to the Crown Bill 2012-13: The Bill would change the rules governing succession to the Crown in two ways. First, there would be no gender discrimination in determining succession, in contrast to the present rules, under which brothers stand ahead of sisters in line to the throne even if they are younger. Secondly, a person marrying a Roman Catholic would no longer be barred from becoming or remaining monarch.

Commons Select Committee takes evidence on e-crime, social networks and social media sites: Social networking has become the most popular online activity, accounting for 19% of all time spent online. Over half of UK households now use social networking sites. As users flock to social networks criminals follow, Norton estimates that 4 / 10 users have been the victim of crime on a social network and 1/6 have had their account hijacked by someone who impersonated them. Chair Keith Vaz, has requested a 'Call for evidence' - to hear from anyone who has been targeted by scams or abuse on social networks. Particularly around what was done to resolve the issues once they have been reported, how long it took to resolve and whether or not the action taken was successful.

IPCC finds failings in the working practices of Southwark Sapphire Unit between July 2008 and September 2009:

This investigation found that during this period the Southwark Sapphire unit was under-performing and over-stretched, and officers of all ranks, often unfamiliar with sexual offence work, felt under pressure to improve performance and meet targets. Victims were questioned closely by a Detective Constable before they met an officer trained in dealing with sex crimes to ensure crimes were classified correctly.

Council Tax - Local authorities split on taking freeze grant: Results from the annual CIPFA Council Tax Demands and Precepts survey shows that currently 41% of councils in England plan to forego the 1% freeze grant offered by the Department of Communities and Local Government and raise council tax for 2013/14. This is significantly up from the 15% of authorities who did not take up the grant last year. Since 59% of councils across England will take the freeze grant, the overall average band D Council Tax bill looks set to rise by 0.8%, the equivalent of £11.74. This increase compares with last year's average rise of 0.3%. <http://www.cipfastats.net/news/newsstory.asp?content=16238>

A new £59 million fund is to be set aside by the Government to boost areas of depressed economic growth and encourage the development of enterprise zones. Eric Pickles, the Local Government and Communities Secretary, said: "Enterprise Zones have all the raw ingredients and growth incentives - simplified planning, low tax, super fast broadband and inward investment. They need to translate their potential into jobs and growth success" (Telegraph).

LGA study finds majority of residents trust councils: 72% of residents are satisfied with the way services are run by their local council, a new report indicates. The research was conducted as part of the LGA's appraisal on the sector-led approach for delivering improvement. The ageing population will have a huge impact on health and social services, and there needs to be a robust plan to prepare for this, a new Lords committee will report. The committee on public service and demographic change has been taking evidence from a range of experts on the impact of the ageing population. It is due to report next month. Half of people born after 2007 can now expect to live to over 100, and between 2010 and 2030 the number of people aged over 65 will increase by 51%. Lord Filkin, chair of the committee, criticised the NHS for not making detailed forecasts for the increase in patients and stated the need for agreement on values and vision of the Government on this issue.

There is a growing threat of a rise in old age poverty after living costs for the over 75s increased by 25 per cent in only five years, research by the insurance group AXA has shown. Simon Smallcombe, Head of Guaranteed Distribution for AXA, said: "Even on basic living costs, if current trends continue, by 2016 the oldest people in the country will see their costs outstripping those of people approaching retirement age" (Times).

30 million in employment – ONS: Almost 30 million people were in employment at the end of 2012, new figures from the ONS show. This is an increase of 154,000 on the quarter to September and is the highest total since records began in 1971.

Welfare reforms could spark a decade of destitution: Universal credit could have helped reduce poverty, but its haphazard implementation alongside sweeping changes will put people and businesses at risk. <http://www.guardian.co.uk/housing-network/2013/feb/26/welfare-reforms-spark-decade-destitution>

Councils are finding creative ways to manage the devolution of council tax benefit to local authorities. Council tax support, the benefit that helps people on low wages or not in work pay their council tax, will be devolved to each local authority on 1 April. Decisions over exactly what form the benefit will take will be made by local councils, including how much residents will pay – despite the fact that the budget to manage this has been cut by 12%. Because pensioners are protected, working age households will bear the majority of the burden this creates.

4. Consultations

Businesses and families invited to shape process for shared parental leave:

Businesses and working families are invited to submit their views on how the system for shared parental leave and pay will work. The consultation will look at how the new system will work and fit together with current arrangements for maternity and paternity leave and adopters, as part of the government's commitment to create a modern workplace. This will influence how the government legislates under the Children and Families Bill 2013, introduced early February which includes the proposals for shared parental leave and flexible working. More detail here <https://www.gov.uk/government/news/reform-of-flexible-parental-leave>

Acas is separately seeking views from employees and employers, particularly small businesses, who have difficulties managing requests for flexible working fairly. Their draft Code is designed to offer short, practical advice to make it easier for employers to handle requests which they can adapt to fit their own workplace procedures. Both consultations will run for 12 weeks. Responses to the Acas consultation can be submitted by email or letter, email address is: rightrequest@acas.org.uk
