Law changing on enforced subject access requests

The law on enforced subject access requests will change on 1 December 2014. The change to Section 56 of the DPA means that organisations will no longer be able to force individuals to make subject access requests for information about their criminal past in order to reveal the results to them.

Anti-Social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Act 2014

The Home Office has announced that there is a delay in the introduction of the Civil Injunction. This is to allow unavoidable and necessary changes to be made to the civil legal system to ensure that applications for advocacy assistance can be assessed for those involved in Civil Injunction hearings. This requires an amendment to the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act 2012 which should be completed by the end of January 2015. Until this change is made the ASBO and ASBI will remain in place. The Home Office has also announced that, in order to allow local councils time for the new powers to bed in and to make informed choices about whether to designate social providers in their area the power to issue the Community Protection Notice the Order made by the Secretary of State that will allow councils to do this. The CPN will still begin on 20th October but only police and councils will be able to issue them.

The Modern Slavery Bill

This Bill has now been committed to a Public Bill Committee. The Public Bill Committee is expected to report to the House by 14 October 2014.

2. Strategic policing and crime news

Home Secretary praises National Crime Agency on first anniversary

NCA has broken new ground in fight against serious and organised crime during first year of operation, with the Home Secretary praising their work.

Ending gang and youth violence – programme extended

Ten new areas will receive specialist support to tackle gang and youth violence it was announced on 8 October. They are: Barnet; Bromley; Havering; Hillingdon; Kensington and Chelsea; Luton; Ipswich; Thanet; Stoke-on-Trent; and Tendring. The programme's network of people with frontline experience of dealing with gangs will work with them to develop a coordinated response.

Interim review of the national referral mechanism for victims of human trafficking

The national referral mechanism is a multi-agency victim identification and support process.

College researching changing nature of demand

On 22 September, the College of Policing announced it is working with police forces to help identify the changing nature of demand and its impact on resources. The College will help build an evidence base around the way frontline resources are being used and how this may have changed over time. The work will include national data and more specific force-level data from twelve rural and urban forces.

The symptom, not the cause report

The recent HMIC report looking at the use of police time highlights how some forces are apparently not properly investigating certain types of crime. The report also highlighted shortcomings – both nationally and at force level - regarding strategies for crime prevention. It furthermore advocated that a national crime prevention strategy be put in place by early next year.

3. Developments and reports

Key PCC initiatives - "ThinkBlueLine"

Conservative PCCs published a pamphlet and accompanying website, containing a collection of their essays setting out some of the successes of their first two years in office. This follows last month's publication of the Labour PCCs' equivalent in a Fabian Society report "Letting in the Light".

Neville-Rolfe: Better enforcement tackling the rise in online intellectual property crime

Consumers must beware of traders using the internet to sell counterfeit and pirated goods, according to Intellectual Property Crime report.

"Emergency services 'will have to be integrated', warns Theresa May"

The need for further spending cuts will necessitate the future integration of the police, fire and ambulance emergency services and the widespread use of body-worn cameras and smartphone apps by officers to save time, the home secretary, Theresa May, has forecast.

Home Secretary speech to Police Superintendents' conference

"May promises more cash and powers to tackle child sex abuse".

IPCC

IPSOS: Public confidence in the Police Complaints Systems.

Ministry of Justice

"More than 80 bids for new rehabilitation contracts". More than 80 bids to win regional rehabilitation contracts and lead the new era in a fight against reoffending are currently being evaluated by the government.

National Crime Agency

"25,000 paedophiles identified - but most will never be caught"

National Crime Agency

"National Crime Agency to feed UK banks real-time cyber-alerts".

Policy Exchange

"Labour shouldn't be scrapping PCCs, it should be working out how to make them better".

Reports, papers, market research and proposals

Ipsos-MORI: Crime "most important electoral issue" for 5%.

Police community support officers could double up as firefighters in an attempt to save money and boost numbers in the fire service.

Essex County Fire and Rescue Service has a shortage of retained firefighters to cover daytime shifts because of the increasing number of people working away from small towns and villages. Now bosses have come up with a controversial scheme in which community support police will be retrained so that they can assist fire crews while out on the beat.

Department for Transport

Annual road fatalities.

Country roads: deadlier than you THINK!

THINK! is launching a new campaign to warn drivers of the dangers of country roads. 60% of fatalities occur on country roads but drivers are oblivious to the risks:

- 3 people die each day on average on rural roads
- the number of people killed on country roads is nearly 11 times higher than on motorways
- a quarter of drivers have had a near miss and 1 driver in 20 has had a collision on a country road

The first charities and voluntary organisations in Rotherham to be given extra cash to help victims of child sexual exploitation have been named. The grants have been announced as part of a £120,000 funding package announced last month to provide an immediate extra support for victims and their families while proposals for long term post-abuse support are drawn up to come into effect next year.

People smuggling plotters jailed after Home Office operation

A Ukrainian gang who attempted to smuggle a group of illegal immigrants into the UK at Orford Quay have been jailed.

Disrupting human trafficking with advanced crime analytics

The ease of international travel now allows more people to travel between countries. But in terms of fighting human trafficking it makes the job of the UK Customs and Border Protection, and other law enforcement agencies charged with securing our nation's ports of entry, far more complex. Paul Stokes, COO of Wynyard Group, reports.

Tackling highly-organised criminals with 'big-data' key to countering rise in UK trafficking, slavery and exploitation

The number of people trafficked for slavery or other exploitation in the UK has risen sharply to more than 2,700, the National Crime Agency (NCA) says. The rise includes people lured to the country after meeting people via online dating or job recruitment sites. The NCA's United Kingdom Human Trafficking Centre estimates that 2,744 people, including 602 children, were potential victims of trafficking for exploitation across the UK in 2013. Early identification is often compromised by traditional crime or event-centric, reactive systems that fail to provide a current and single view of a person of interest and the escalating risk of an offence occurring. Using data analytics software to assess critical risk management information while protecting identities, allows agencies to co-ordinate efforts, dynamically assess risk and respond immediately to alerts.

Communities should keep all criminal assets say town hall chiefs

Councils should be allowed to keep all cash and assets seized from criminals to help improve the lives of local communities, according to the Local Government Association (LGA). The LGA said councils help recover around £40m a year from benefit fraudsters and rogue traders under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, but have to hand half back to the Government.

Judges should oversee police applications for stop and search, says Simon Hughes Extract of Simon Hughes' speech to the Liberal Democrat Party Conference

Liberal Democrats propose new approach on drugs and crime

New party policy which would mean a comprehensive new approach on drugs. The plans come alongside wide ranging plans to reduce crime set out at the Liberal Democrat conference in Glasgow, and against a backdrop of falling crime figures since the party entered government. The party's members voted to pass the new policy paper which also includes measures to:

- Outlaw 'revenge porn'.
- Harsher punishments for those convicted of hate crime against LGBT+ and disabled people.
- Greater use of restorative justice for crimes where it's proven to help cut crime.
- Increase funding for tackling gangs.
- Improve recognition and treatment of mental health conditions in the justice system.

Care inspectors launch 'mum test'

A new 'mum test' for inspecting care homes and community adult social care in England has been hailed as an end to 'tick-box' attitudes. England's independent regulator of health and social care has tasked inspectors with considering whether they would be happy for their loved ones to use the services they are examining. The new care home inspection regime will give families a 'clear, jargon free and reliable' rating based on what matters most, say inspectors.

This consultation was published on 1 October and closes on 31 December. It consults on the merger of the four local justice areas in North Yorkshire into one local justice area. It seeks the views of people or organisations that may be affected including magistrates, other judicial office holders, court users, stakeholders and public authorities and charities in North Yorkshire.

Local policing – accountability, leadership and ethics

The independent Committee on Standards in Public Life has launched an inquiry into the accountability structures of the police. The current model as a whole, and individual elements of it, have been the subject of criticism. Much of this relates to standards issues, yet the relationship between standards and governance structures has been relatively underexplored. They intend to look at the structures in place for ensuring ethical standards in the conduct and performance of Police and Crime Panels, Police and Crime Commissioners, and Chief Constables. Then go on to consider how effective those structures are, what works well and, if there are shortcomings, identify what would be expected to see – in any model for police accountability. They will be seeking the necessary assurance that ethical standards in public life are, and are capable of being, upheld. Consultation closes 30 November 2014.

Last chance to take part in our consultations on big data, privacy seals and data sharing code

The ICO has extended the deadline for comments on the data protection issues relating to big data. The paper on big data and data protection sets out views and the ICO would like to hear thoughts on the questions set out at the end of the document. The closing date is the 17 October 2014.
