Research map to boost policing and crime-reduction knowledge - A new interactive map of current academic research on policing and crime reduction has been launched by the College of Policing.

ACPO does not condone use of ERBs as split hoods, says Commander David Martin

“The Emergency Response Belt (ERB) was introduced into national police practice as a limb restraint. Its use was considered by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) and an independent group of health professionals before being included within national practice advice. ACPO would not endorse its use for anything other than its primary function. “At the centre of police decision-making is the principle that officers will, in the face of violence, be professional, calm and restrained and apply only that force which is necessary to accomplish their lawful duty. Any use of force by officers in protecting themselves, the public and any detainee from harm should be applied with this principle in mind.”

Committee publishes report on renewed strategy to tackle tobaccos fraud

The Rt Hon Margaret Hodge MP, Chair of the Committee of Public Accounts, today said: "Tobacco smuggling is not a victimless crime. Each year it constitutes a theft of revenue to the tune of some £1.9 billion, 20% of the total sum collected through tax. It undermines drives to cut smoking and is also linked to the activities of organized crime."

Forces warned over restraining belts on detainees' heads.

The police watchdog issues a warning to officers to stop using restraining belts on detainees' heads following a man's death. His family wants to see CCTV footage from the police station.

Police 'struggling' with historical child abuse workload.

The NSPCC says some police forces are struggling to deal with an increase in historical child abuse cases, after the BBC obtained figures indicating arrests in such cases had fallen. The number of allegations rose by 70% after Jimmy Savile's past was widely publicised, but arrests fell by 6% over the same period.

Victim Support helps abuse victims in wake of high profile investigations

Local Victim Support staff and volunteers are reporting increases in the numbers of victims coming forward to seek help following sex abuse – suggesting the raised profile of the issue is giving victims the confidence to come forward to report, whether affected by the activities of Savile or as part of other, unrelated cases.

Falling officer numbers: Emergency response times hit.

Sussex Fed vents concerns at chief constable following the loss of 300 officers.

Ian Learmonth to stand down as Kent's Chief Constable.

3. Reports

Victim Support

Out of the shadows: Victims' and Witnesses' experiences of attending the Crown Court. Findings highlight how important it is that victims and witnesses are treated with consideration and respect by the range of professionals with whom they come into contact; including Witness Care Unit staff, the police, court staff, Witness Service staff and volunteers, barristers and the judge. Considerate and respectful treatment makes the difficulties and frustrations of coming to court more manageable, and helps to reduce any sense of marginalisation.

Ministry of Justice

Further breakdown of cautions.

Justice Data Lab Statistics April to October 2013

Presents a summary of the requests for re-offending information through the Justice Data Lab for the period 2nd April 2013 to 31st September 2013. This report is published alongside the tailored reports which have been produced for individual organisations requesting information through the Justice Data Lab.

At risk yet dismissed

The report follows research by Victim Support, Mind, the Institute of Psychiatry at King's College London, the Faculty of Health, Social Care and Education at Kingston University and St George's, University of London, in collaboration with University College London.

The report reveals that people with mental health problems are:

- three times more likely to be a victim of crime than the general population
- five times more likely to be a victim of assault and rises to 10 times more likely if you're a woman
- more likely to be a repeat victim of crime
- far less likely to be satisfied with the service they receive.

It is the first UK survey on crime against people with severe mental health problems. The findings paint a stark picture of the risks and the barriers people with mental health problems face in getting the help they need.

Councils attacked over 15-minute care visits

The rising trend for care organisations to provide only ‘flying’ 15-minute home visits has been condemned by a leading charity. Leonard Cheshire Disability has released a poll showing that 93% of people agreed with it that 15 minutes is not enough time to support disabled and elderly people with washing, dressing and bathing. But there has been a 15% rise in the proportion of care visits lasting 15 minutes or less in the last five years, according to its new report, ‘Ending 15 minute care’.

Andrew Haldenby took part in Guardian Live Chat for the Public Leader’s Network on public sector reform. Andrew argued that public spending cuts have been a catalyst for more innovative forms of public service delivery, that performance related pay is crucial in achieving greater efficiency, and that important reforms still need to be made with regards to the NHS and pensioner benefits (Guardian Online).

‘Can-do’ councils leading transformation of local government

18 local authorities to share £7 million for cutting edge shared service projects.

Local Government Minister Brandon Lewis announced today (9 October 2013) that 18 local authorities will share a £6.9 million reward for radically overhauling how they do business, a part of the government’s pledge to transform public services.

Successful schemes will:

- accelerate integration of local health care services
- create shared finance and HR for emergency services
- create a shared asset management company partnership
- use service data to drive efficiency and better delivery

The winners of the Transformation Challenge Award will receive funding for demonstrating their ability to remain at the cutting edge of service transformation, while delivering efficiency savings.
