New Victim's Strategy sets out the government's vision for a justice system that supports more victims to speak up by giving them the certainty that they will be understood, protected, and supported throughout their journey, regardless of their circumstances or background. The strategy includes commitments to:-

- Consult on and revise the Victims' Code by the end of 2019 to ensure entitlements reflect victim needs and agencies are held to account for compliance through improved reporting, monitoring and transparency
- Better enforcement of the Victims' Code, with increased responsibility for PCCs in monitoring delivery
- Consult on and amend a Victims' Law and strengthen the powers of the Victims' Commissioner's
- Consult on establishing an Independent Advocate (IPA) to help bereaved families following tragic events
- Review the entire Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme (CICS) so it reflects the changing nature of crime
- Abolish the 'same roof rule' which denied compensation for some victims who lived with their attacker
- Simplify the Victim Contact Scheme and improve the quality of communication during the parole process
- Allow Victim Personal Statements at parole hearings and roll out revised training for Victim Liaison Officers
- Improve police training and trial the use of BWV cameras to take Victim Personal Statements
- Increase spending by £8m on Sexual Assault Referral Centre support for victims of sexual abuse
- Invest £8m in interventions to ensure support is available to children who witness domestic abuse
- 25% increase in registered Intermediaries helping vulnerable victims and witnesses give their best evidence
- Improve court environments, including the development of new victim-friendly waiting areas
- Develop a new delivery model for victim support services, and coordinate funding across government

Commissioner's e-Briefing: 17 September 2018

2. RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT AND STATISTICS

Love, fear and control — does the criminal justice system reduce domestic abuse? – 3 September 2018

Transform Justice report highlights problems with the current criminal justice response to domestic abuse cases, and considers the range of interventions available and their impact. The report highlights levels of blame and conflicting tensions among different stakeholders within the criminal justice system, and the ineffectiveness of criminal sanctions in reducing abuse and the high cost of DVPOs. Recommendations include

- Improve understanding of the support victims most need to prevent cases collapsing, why domestic abuse has reduced over recent years and the evidence base for what works, including use of restorative justice
- Pause steps to make criminal sentences harsher and review plans to expand the domestic violence protection order, given the limited evidence of their effectiveness in reducing abuse
- Incentivise the use of specialist out of court disposals such as those delivered by Project CARA, rewrite police guidance to support appropriate use of out of court disposals and pilot use of deferred prosecutions
- Evaluate the domestic abuse programmes delivered by prisons and probation and expand the availability of successful accredited perpetrator programmes delivered by prisons and probation, and in the community
- Reform and revive specialist domestic abuse courts for cases where prosecution is in the public interest

Self-harm by adult men in prison – 13 September 2018

MOJ Rapid Evidence Assessment of the international research and published literature on characteristics and motivations of adult men who self-harm in prison finds that, in addition to the characteristics and circumstances of the men themselves, staff knowledge and understanding were also identified as a factor. The review concludes that there is an ongoing need for training and support for prison staff on this issue. Good multi-disciplinary communications, early identification of risk and support for men in prison to solve daily problems as they arise are also identified as factors likely to reduce the incidence of self-harm.

Understanding prison violence – 6 September 2018

MOJ rapid evidence assessment review of 97 research studies published 2000 identifies several factors associated with increased violence in prisons, including the challenging behaviours that people bring with them into prison, exacerbating features of the prison environment, and the nature of the daily regime and interactions between staff and prisoners. The review concludes that a crucial factor in maintaining order is the availability and the skills of prison staff in exercising their authority in a way that appears legitimate and justifiable to prisoners, and is enacted consistently and fairly by both officers and senior managers. Safer prisons require a high level of staff skills so that they can build positive and collaborative relationships with prisoners and work with them to understand and manage the influences on their everyday behaviour.

Sexual assaults reported in prisons: exploratory findings – 6 September 2018

MOJ publish exploratory analysis of narrative descriptions of 1,742 alleged sexual assaults in prisons reported between 2002 and 2014. While the findings should be treated with caution due to the fact that the data was not collected for research purposes and include unsubstantiated allegations, the research found that:-

- 20% of recorded sexual assaults entailed non-genital physical contact and 16% were recorded as involving genital or groin contact. 11% of sexual assaults were coded as rape, which was also the assault category most likely to see some form of repeat victimisation.
- Perpetrators of rape or assaults involving genital or groin contact were most likely serving sentences for sexual offences while perpetrators of assaults involving non-penile penetration were more likely to be serving sentences for violent or acquisitive offences
- 10% of cases were classed as assault by non-penile penetration, most often involving groups of two or more whose main motivation was to retrieve drugs. Assaults involving non-penile penetration motivated by the retrieval of a mobile phone was the only category to show an increasing trend over time

Operation of police powers under the Terrorism Act 2000 to June 2018 – Published 13 September 2018

The number of terrorism-related arrests (351) in the 12 months to June 2018 fell by 22% compared to the previous year, largely impacted by the 51 arrests following the London and Manchester attacks no longer falling within the 12 month reporting period. Around 34% of arrests (120) over the previous 12 months led to a charge, with 52% (184) being released without charge. A further 8% (29) were released on bail pending further investigation. Out of 100 trials completed by the Crown Prosecution Service during the year, 90 led to a conviction. As at 30 June 2018 there were 218 people in custody for terrorism-related offences domestic extremism / separatism, which marked a 7% increase on the previous year.

Police complaints: Statistics for England and Wales 2017/18 – Published 13 September 2018

IOPC annual report on police complaints shows that overall recorded complaints fell by 7% during the year to 31,671, while allegations fell by a smaller proportion from 279 per 1,000 employees to 274. The proportion of allegations being dealt with by less formal 'local resolution' varies between 10% and 75% across forces, highlighting significant discrepancies in the way police forces handle complaints. 39% of police complaints were categorised as 'other neglect or failure in duty', with a further 12% recorded as 'incivility, impoliteness and intolerance'. Work is underway to define the complaint categories in a more meaningful way. The total number of appeals fell by 8% in 2017/18 to 6,943. Data available at police force level. APCC comment

Knife and offensive weapon sentencing: April to June 2018 – Published 13 September 2018

Ministry of Justice statistics show a 6% rise in knife and offensive weapon offences dealt with by the CJS in 2017/18 (21,101) when compared to the previous year. This continues the increasing trend seen since 2014 (16,430). 36% of offences resulted in immediate custody, compared to 23% in June 2009. 83% of offenders sentenced under section 28 of the Criminal Justice and Courts Act 2015 received some form of custodial sentence in the year ending June 2018. The average custodial sentence (7.9 months) has risen by 0.8 months since June 2017. For 72% of offenders cautioned or convicted for these offences, this was their first such offence. Further data available at police force level.

Asset recovery statistical bulletin: 2013 to 2018 – Published 13 September 2018

Five year data snapshot of asset recovery, using Proceeds of Crime Act powers, shows that £185m of criminal proceeds were confiscated in 2017/18, marking an 8% increase on 2012/13 (£171m). Cash forfeiture has remained relatively stable, averaging around £40m a year. Recipients of Asset Recovery Incentivisation Scheme (ARIS) monies typically allocate the largest portion to investing in future asset recovery work. In 2017/18, £30m was paid in compensation to victims from the proceeds of confiscation.

Screen to identify individuals within the CJS with learning support needs – 13 September 2018

MOJ research describing the development of a tool to identify individuals in the criminal justice system who may be more likely to have a learning disability and struggle with their sentence.

The threat to police and criminal justice after Brexit – 6 September 2018

Institute for Government report highlights the risks of failing to secure a new agreement on policing and criminal justice following Brexit, which include challenges in extraditing dangerous offenders, reductions in the number of people brought back to the UK to face justice and the loss of access to EU-wide databases.

4. REVIEWS AND INQUIRIES

Financial sustainability of police forces in England and Wales 2018 – 11 September 2018

National Audit Office report, following up on a review undertaken in 2015, highlights that central government funding to commissioners has fallen by 30% in real terms since 2010-11, while forces have reduced the total size of their workforce by around 18% over the same period. No police force has failed financially, however, there are signs emerging that some are finding it harder to deliver an effective service, and the amount of reserves set aside for specific costs or exceptional events fell by 20% between March 2015 and March 2017.

The report criticises the Home Office's 'light touch' approach, noting:-

- The lack of a long-term plan for policing and significant gaps in understanding of demand for police services
- An ineffective model for distributing funding which remains detached from the changing nature of policing
- No systematic approach to ensuring forces are financially sustainable and funding is directed appropriately

The report makes recommendations for the Home Office to:-

- Clarify accountability relationships and processes for policing at all levels of the system
- Develop a clearer ongoing understanding of whether force funding is sufficient to ensure effective service
- Review the funding formula to take account of forces' local circumstances more fairly
- Develop an overall strategy for policing that includes clarifies the contribution of key support programmes
- Ensure the APCC, NPCC and PRTB have the resources and powers to succeed in their leadership roles

Review of PCC Remuneration Report on job evaluation – 13 September 2018

A report on the job evaluation of PCCs for the Review Body on Senior Salaries considers the change in scope and responsibility since the first PCC elections and benchmarks job size and responsibility level against other similar roles, such as a Minister of State. The report concludes that:-

- The elected office of PCC is marginally larger than anticipated in 2011 due to additional responsibilities
- The scope of PCC work is likely to continue to expand following changes in the Police and Crime Act 2017 and the influence PCCs are able to exercise across a range of public services in their area
- The size of PCC offices vary significantly by the size and complexity of PCC areas. On this basis, the current simplification of Chief Constable pay groupings used to determine PCC pay are broadly correct
- PCC's involvement in FRS is part of their growing influence and does not warrant a separate allowance
- There is a need to identify an objective mechanism for a regular uplift in salary during PCCs term in office

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme review launched – 9 September 2018

Justice Secretary, David Gauke, announces a full review of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme to improve access to compensation, and to consider how the scheme might better serve victims - especially victims of child sexual abuse and terrorism. The review will begin immediately and is expected to report in 2019 with recommendations for reform. Announcement made as part of the cross government victims strategy

Inquiries

Financial sustainability of police forces in England and Wales inquiry – Launched 11 September 2018
