Justice Minister speech 'Beyond prison, redefining punishment' – 18 February 2019

David Gauke sets out his vision for a "smart" justice system using evidence of what works to reduce reoffending, protect the public and ensure serious criminals receive punishment. The Minister urged for caution in continuing to increase sentence length as a response to concerns over crime and for those who shape the system to consider whether our approach to sentencing reduces crime, if prisons currently maximise the chances of rehabilitation and if we should look at better alternatives to punish and rehabilitate offenders.

National roll out of new GPS monitoring tags announced - 16 February 2019

Justice Secretary announced the national roll out of new GPS tags which will provide 24/7 location monitoring of offenders, help strengthen supervision, enforce exclusion zones and help to protect victims. The new capability will issue an automatic alert and whereabouts of known tagged domestic abusers, stalkers or gang members found in an area they have been excluded from. The tags also provide a tougher option for community sentences which can be used alongside requirements like alcohol or drug treatment programmes. Satellite tracking to be rolled out nationwide by summer.

The report follows up on a similar survey undertaken in 2016, highlighting:-

- No significant change in average weekly overtime worked by officers each week (2.5 hours), or the proportion with working overtime as 'there weren't enough officers on shift' (53%)
- 76.1% of front line officers stating that they were often or always single crewed, up from 73.3% in 2016
- 72% had been refused annual leave more than once and 52% were rarely able to take their full rest break
- 27.6% said their team's minimum officer staffing level was never or rarely met, compared to 21% in 2016

Policing by machine: Predictive policing and the threat to our rights – 4 February 2019

Report from Liberty collates results of 90 Freedom of Information requests to UK police forces in the UK on their use or intended use of algorithms to inform 'predictive policing'. The report sets out how approaches to mapping future crime and predict offending and victimisation of crime can threaten public rights and freedoms. The report highlights how algorithms based on 'biased police data' can entrench pre-existing discrimination and direct officers to patrol areas which are already disproportionately over-policed. The report also highlights a 'severe lack of transparency' in the use of predictive algorithms and a significant risk of 'automation bias' where a human decision-maker defers to the machine accepting its indecipherable recommendation as correct.

Process Evaluation of the GPS Electronic Monitoring Pilot – 16 February 2019

The report recognises the good work being carried out by the majority of police forces including continued investment in training, developing multi-agency safeguarding hubs, the increase in use of body worn video to capture evidence at the scene of an incident and the increased roll-out of schemes such as Operation Encompass where police and schools work together to support children present at domestic abuse incidents.
