Code of Practice for Victims of Crime in England and Wales – 18 November 2020

Ministry of Justice publishes a simplified and updated Victims' Code alongside the government response to its consultation: 'Improving the Victims' Code'. The new Code comes into force on 1 April 2021 and includes 12 overarching rights to ensure that victims understand and are aware of the level of service they can expect to receive. The revised code makes clear to service providers that they should aim to minimise the number of different people victims have contact with and where possible, offer a single point of contact. The revised Code also includes information about access support without reporting incidents to the police or at any stage of an investigation; the support available to victims of Foreign National Offenders and; the right for victims of unrestricted mentally disordered offenders to be assigned a Victim Liaison Officer as opposed to requiring victims to contact hospitals directly. Victims of a sexual or violent offences and offences involving a term of imprisonment exceeding one year, victims will be automatically referred to the Victim Contact Scheme which provides updates on offenders and their potential release from prison. The updated Code also introduces more discretion as to when a victim should be offered the opportunity to make a Victim Personal Statement.

Fire and rescue incident statistics: England, year ending June 2020 – Published 12 November 2020

FRSs attended 549,913 incidents in the year ending June 2020, marking a 4% decrease on the previous year (573,776). Of these incidents, 156,128 were fires marking a 15% decrease on the previous year (182,661). Secondary fires saw the most notable reduction (-20%) following the hot, dry 2018 summer. There were 231 fire-related fatalities in the year to June 2020 compared with 271 in the previous year. ## 3. AUDITS AND INSPECTIONS

National Crime Agency's relationship with regional organised crime units – 12 November 2020

HMICFRS inspection report finds that the National Crime Agency (NCA) and Regional Organised Crime Units (ROCU) work well together in some areas of law enforcement and have an effective meeting structure that helps to maintain strong organisational links. The inspection found significant difficulties in recruiting and retaining staff in both the NCA and the ROCUs and reduction in the number of Regional organised crime co-ordinators rendering them less able to engage with the ROCU network. The report advises the NCA to invest in its control room in order to better manage the agency's resources. The report also noted that ROCUs face pressure to operate according to the priorities of chief constables and PCCs who are responsible for their main funding – as opposed to national priorities. This can create a tension between the NCA's work and that of the ROCU network. The report makes recommendations for:-

- Home Office, as part of its review of the Strategic Policing Requirement, should consider how greater emphasis is placed on national threats such as serious and organised crime by PCCs and chief constables
- Home Office should conduct a review of the funding arrangements for ROCUs that would reduce barriers to better integrated working between the NCA and ROCU network
- Home Office to consider changes to legislation can be made to allow the NCA to formally task ROCUs
- NCA must make sure its control room has an effective duty management system with immediate effect
- NCA should revise and publish the job description for the regional organised crime co-ordinator role
- NCA and the ROCU network should agree to the use of the NCA method of defining threat and prioritisation

4. REVIEWS AND INQUIRIES

New Inquiry Launched into Self-Generated Indecent Images of Children – 9 November 2020

The inquiry will seek to understand how such content is generated, the current initiatives in place to prevent its circulation and explore what the impact is of the new Relationships, Health and Education curriculum could be in developing children's understanding of healthy relationships. The inquiry would like to hear from stakeholders across the child protection landscape, law enforcement, teachers, parents, guardians, tech companies, academia and children themselves about the extent of this challenge. Submissions to media@iwf.org.uk are requested by 5pm on Sunday 31 January 2021.

Children and Young People in Custody \(Part 1\): Entry into the youth justice system – 12 November 2020

House of Commons Justice Committee inquiry highlights a diminishing number of children and young people aged 10-17 entering the youth justice system (YJS) alongside increases in the proportion of involved in serious offences, many compounded by issues of mental health, social exclusion and substance misuse. The report also further highlights issues of disproportionality, with more than half of all children currently in youth custody being from minority ethnic backgrounds. Key recommendations include:-

- Development of a whole system approach to address the complexity of the issues faced by those in the YJS
- MoJ and YJB should centrally collect data on non-statutory informal diversion schemes, including demographic information to help assess levels of disproportionality
- MoJ should commission a national evaluation of the impact and effectiveness of formal and informal out of court disposals and set out national guidance on their use informed by evidence and good practice
- MoJ and YJB should review current funding to ensure it reflects YOT's pre-court diversionary work
- MoJ should review the age of criminal responsibility, considering data from other comparable jurisdictions

Exceptional Delivery Model arrangements for probation in response to COVID-19 – 18 November 2020

HMI Probation thematic review commends probation leaders and staff on their compassionate and professional response to COVID-19, having implemented exceptional delivery plans prioritising effective safeguarding and public protection were prepared at speed. Multi-agency partnership arrangements to manage the risk of harm presented by individuals residing in approved premises were good despite variations in mental health provision and reduced access to drug and alcohol services. The report notes innovations introduced during the pandemic including the establishment of a 'live chat' service for victims of domestic abuse in one area inspected and notable examples of partnership working in some Integrated Offender Management (IOM) teams. Some service users reported that their contact with responsible officers had become more frequent during the pandemic. Services to manage the risk of harm that individuals presented were largely being delivered well, although there are lessons to be learned and some work to keep people safe should have been more comprehensive. Contact levels offered were, however, commensurate with the assessed level of risk and need.

The work of youth offending services during the COVID-19 pandemic – 18 November 2020

HMI Probation thematic review concludes that leaders and managers at a local and partnership level responded quickly to the needs of children and families during the early stages of the pandemic, prioritising children in greatest need and the safety of the workforce. The review finds examples of innovation, care and commitment to supporting children. Local authorities and YOT partners did, however, feel inundated with guidance documentation which would have benefited from being in a standard format. Some work was initially halted but safely reintroduced over time. Out-of-court disposal panels resumed quickly alongside work to support desistance. Case managers to focus on children who were identified as high priority as new court-ordered cases reduced as a result of the closures. The clearing of court backlogs is, however, expected to have a significant impact on YOT workloads over the coming months. The review found that some aspects of work have lent themselves to a remote approach; including attendance at multi-agency meetings. Staff were creative in developing online sessions with children, promoting learning and their wellbeing. Multi-agency risk management processes continued during the pandemic, however, the report notes that a sharper focus and more detailed planning is still required in protecting parental victims of child and adolescent violence.

A thematic review of probation recall culture and practice – 10 November 2020

HMI Probation thematic review of recall decision-making finds that public protection and the protection of victims are the primary focus of probation service decision-making. Responsible officers make impressive efforts to engage non-compliant service users in what can be highly complex and resource-intensive cases. The inspection did, however, find inconsistencies in knowledge, criteria and processes among some staff and managers and inconsistencies in the threshold, recording and delivery of warnings and in the access to and use of alternatives to recall, such as approved premises (APs) and electronic monitoring. The report makes recommendations for HM Prison and Probation Service to:-

- introduce a revised process for issuing licence warnings (incl. guidance on thresholds and practice advice)
- review the use, accessibility and effectiveness of alternatives to recall (incl. the role of approved premises)
- analyse information on recalls to identify significant variations in practice between and within organisations
- ensure that bias and unconscious bias in recall decisions are reviewed as part of the assurance process
- review the operation of executive release to ensure it operates consistently across all organisations
- ensure time to fully assess suitability of release addresses when implementing home detention curfews
- ensure a shared understanding of the recall framework within the new English regional probation divisions.

ACMD Publishes Review of GHB and Related Compounds – 20 November 2020

ACMD review of harms relating to the use of GHB, GBL and associated compounds concludes that there is a need to develop systems for future monitoring of their prevalence, including higher use among the LGBT community. The report also highlights evidence of significant harm arising from the criminal use of GHB, GBL and related compounds including escalated risk of murder, drug-facilitated sexual assault and robbery. The report recommends that GHB, GBL and 1,4-BD is reclassified from Class C to Class B.
