Police in England and Wales arrest almost 100 girls a day says Howard League for Penal Reform

Police arrest almost 100 girls a day in England and Wales, figures obtained by the Howard League for Penal Reform reveal. However, the overall number has almost halved in three years after the charity launched a campaign aimed at keeping as many children as possible out of the criminal justice system. Police made more than 34,000 arrests of girls aged 17 and younger during 2011 whereas three years earlier in 2008, more than 62,000 arrests were recorded. Several police services have reviewed their arrest procedures and policies as a result of the Howard League's engagement with them.

Fourteen police services recorded a fall in arrests of more than 50 per cent. They were Bedfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Dorset, Essex, Gloucestershire, Hertfordshire, Humberside, Lancashire, Northumbria, Suffolk, Thames Valley, Warwickshire, West Midlands and West Yorkshire. Only one police service, City of London, recorded an increase.

Youth Justice Board - Young People and the Secure Estate: Needs and Intervention.

This report, by the Institute for Criminal Policy Research (ICPR), Birkbeck, University of London, and Ipsos MORI, was commissioned by the Youth Justice Board for England and Wales (YJB) in 2008. It provides an in-depth examination of the identified needs of children and young people within the secure estate and the interventions they received, based on fieldwork conducted over the course of 2010 to early 2011.

3. Reports

The Chancellor of the Exchequer delivered his Budget to Parliament on 20 March 2013, alongside the publication of the Office for Budget Responsibility's updated forecasts for growth and borrowing, which highlights the public sector net borrowing will be broadly stable at around £120 billion last year, this year and next after adjusting for recent policy decisions with a temporary effect on the headline deficit. The Government's plan for the economy, first set out in June Budget 2010, is based on:

- Fiscal responsibility to deal with our debts with a deficit-reduction plan.
- Monetary activism to support demand and keep interest rates low.
- Supply-side reform to help businesses create jobs and deliver lasting prosperity.

This Budget aims to help those who aspire to work hard and get on, buy a home, start a business or save for retirement.

Revolving Doors Agency - Supporting vulnerable people in custody and at court: An update for the voluntary and community sector: Health inequalities within the offender population are high, with studies consistently revealing that those in contact with the criminal justice system are significantly more likely than the general population to experience poorer physical and mental health, require support in relation to substance misuse issues, or have multiple support needs across these and other areas.

A new partnership to keep young runaways safe

An agreement has been signed between the Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre (CEOP) and The Children's Society which sets out how they will work together to improve support for children and young people who run away or go missing from home or care.

Cyber Crime Reduction Partnership launched

'It Happens Here – Equipping the United Kingdom to fight modern slavery'

Modern slavery is a disturbing and complex problem. Breaking the lives of the vulnerable and voiceless, it represents a grave abuse of human rights and basic dignity. Victims in the UK represent the damaging effect of the five pathways to poverty. Many encountered during the course of this research have come from broken families, leaving them less protected from attachments to those who wish them harm. Some have been unable to find work, leaving them more vulnerable to exploitation. Others are serious addicts, some struggle with unmanageable debt and many have never experienced decent education.

UCL Jill Dando Institute of Crime Science - Problem Solving for Neighbourhood Policing. Solving local crime problems is important because if they aren't solved they will continue to damage the lives of the people who live in communities. Residents and others are likely to feel unsafe and to have a negative opinion of their local police. The guide will be useful to police officers and others who work on neighbourhood policing teams, as well as other people responsible for dealing with crime and disorder in local communities.

Embedding 'evidence-based policing' at operational level

Martin Innes and Trudy Lowe of Cardiff University's Police Science Institute, discuss the benefits of employing an evidence-based approach in day-to-day policing.

Inspiring Terrorism?

Over the last two years several court cases involving people allegedly involved in terrorism in the UK have mentioned a publication called Inspire. One of its recurring themes is the use of fire as a key element of terrorism. Dr Dave Sloggett looks back over the first ten editions to explore its approach to trying to radicalise vulnerable people and assess its impact.

New film reveals the unheard voices of the 2011 riots

An Oxford law graduate who was arrested during the 2011 riots in London has made a documentary that challenges the depiction of rioters as mindless criminals.

PSNI trial first green police car

The Police Service of Northern Ireland has taken delivery of a Vauxhall Ampera police car, making it the first force in the country to trial the petrol-electric range extender.

Online child abuse images greater concern than terrorism say IWF

Child sexual abuse images are of more concern to internet users in Britain than any other illegal or potentially harmful content with the Internet Watch Foundation suggesting that most people are unaware how to report such content. The IWF survey of over 2,000 people found 83% of those polled were worried about the websites, 73% by terrorist material and 68% by violent pornography.

Police officers are to stop attending every report of a missing person in an effort to concentrate resources on those for whom going missing is out of character or who are thought to be at risk.

A new "absent" category will be created for those who are merely not where they are expected to be and their cases monitored (BBC Online).

Clinks - Six principles for engaging the VCS in community justice and community safety.

This guide provides six overarching principles to support statutory engagement with the Voluntary and Community Sector (VCS). It provides a rationale as to why you would adopt each principle, practical examples of where they have been applied well, and tips on how to implement them.

New technology to improve children's mental health services

The Department of Health has announced £2m for new handheld computers to boost children's mental health services.

Demos - Control Shift: We need a new settlement between the state, the individual and local communities ...

Control Shift is the final output of a project which was designed to reach some consensus over what 'responsibility' means in terms of policy – based on a series of expert roundtables, analysis of public polling and attitudinal research. It looks at what levels of personal and civic responsibility people yearn for, where such reciprocity throws up political discomfort and what might be achievable in terms of rebalancing the individual's relationship with the state. This report makes the case for embracing so-called 'nudge-plus' proposals, incentivising healthy behaviour and making it easier for people to make informed decisions and take greater responsibility. By implementing ideas such as creating an independent Risk Commission, making better use of data and rewarding proactive local authorities with a community cashback scheme, the report argues that the Government can support individuals, families and communities in making better choices without being heavy-handed.

New Philanthropy Capital

Money for Good UK. Donations from individuals are crucial for charities' survival. They allow charities the flexibility to innovate and find new ways to solve social problems. But what do donors think about when deciding where and how much to give? And what would inspire them to give more? Money for Good UK explores the habits, attitudes and motivations of the UK's donors.

Department for Communities and Local Government

Statistics on fires, casualties, false alarms and non-fire incidents attended by fire and rescue services in England.

Policy Exchange

A Right to Build: Local homes for local people. First time buyers and pensioners looking to downsize will be able to benefit from a radically new proposal that allows local people to buy their own plot of land and design their own custom built home. A Right to Build says that councils that fail to hit their own housing targets should have to release land to local people who want to design their own homes. In 2012, construction began on just 100,000 homes.

Sign clutter tackled with new award

Town halls will be rewarded for taking action against the scourge of unnecessary traffic signs with a new prize launched by the Transport Secretary. The award is part of the Government's drive to cut the number of signs spoiling our towns, cities and countryside. Many local authorities are making good progress in getting rid of clutter from their roads but the Government wants to see more action being taken to make old and confusing signs a thing of the past.

The King's Fund

Volunteering in health and care. The health and social care system being under extreme pressure to improve the quality and efficiency of services. Report on how to meet the challenges ahead, service providers will need to think differently about how they work and who they work with.

Leading education academics have written an open letter to The Daily Telegraph in which they criticise the new national curriculum as demanding “too much too young”. The letter argues that an undue focus on memorising facts is depriving children of the opportunity to learn skills such as problem-solving and creativity (Telegraph).

UK unemployment rises 7,000 to 2.52m

- The employment rate for those aged from 16 to 64 for November 2012 to January 2013 was 71.5%, up 0.3 percentage points from August to October 2012. There were 29.73 million people in employment aged 16 and over, up 131,000 from August to October 2012.
- The unemployment rate for November 2012 to January 2013 was 7.8% of the economically active population, unchanged from August to October 2012. There were 2.52 million unemployed people, up 7,000 from August to October 2012.
- The inactivity rate for those aged from 16 to 64 for November 2012 to January 2013 was 22.3%, down 0.3 percentage points from August to October 2012. There were 8.95 million economically inactive people aged from 16 to 64, down 118,000 from August to October 2012.
- Between November 2011 to January 2012 and November 2012 to January 2013 total pay and regular pay rose by 1.2%. However as inflation measured by the Consumer Prices Index was 2.7% between January 2012 and January 2013, there continues to be a cut in the real value of pay.

4. Consultations

Sentencing for environmental offences

The Sentencing Council has launched a consultation on proposals to update guidance for judges and magistrates when sentencing environmental offences. The consultation will run from 14 March 2013 to 6 June 2013 and seeks responses from both criminal justice professionals and the general public on:

- the principal factors that make an environmental offence more or less serious;
- the additional factors that should influence the sentence;
- the sentences that should be given for environmental offences; and
- anything else that should be considered.
