1. Legislation

Anti-social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Bill

The Anti-social Behaviour, Crime and Policing Bill completed the commons committee stage on 16 July 2013.

Motoring offenders face increase in financial deposits

The government has published the Road Safety (Financial Penalty Deposit) (Appropriate Amount) (Amendment) Order 2013.

2. Policing and crime key developments

Police Commissioners should be allowed to fire prison governors, says new report

A Policy Exchange report says that PCCs are operating with one arm tied behind their backs. They need to be given more responsibility over the performance of local criminal justice agencies in order to make a real difference.

European committee publishes working document on Combating Violence Against Women

This working document is intended to list existing legislation in the area of combating violence against women (or related areas), to identify possible legal bases for a directive (or a set of directives) and finally to suggest some other ideas for actions at EU level on this key issue. It is therefore a tool for gathering ideas and raise the debate among FEMM shadow rapporteurs and MEP in view of drafting (and presenting in October 2013) a legislative initiative report on combating violence against women (VAW) that would contain both a resolution and a proposal for a EU directive

HMIC notes Nottinghamshire custody improvement

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary has published a report commending Nottinghamshire Police on the 'significant improvement' of its custody provision.

Digital fingerprint first for East Midlands forces

Three forces - Derbyshire, Lincolnshire and Nottinghamshire - are collaborating to become the first in England and Wales to digitise their entire fingerprint records.

Policing Minister praises digital innovators in Hampshire

Policing Minister Damian Green has praised Hampshire Police's "effective and ambitious" use of digital technology.

Police forces: handling of DBS check applications

Since mid-June there has been a number of legislative changes introduced which affect the way Police forces review DBS check applications, if these are sent to the Police for consideration. These changes, along with a seasonal increase in application volumes, are having an impact on turnaround times at some forces.

Criminal cautions to be checked by magistrates

Magistrates could be given a range of new powers, including oversight of police officers' use of cautions rather than prosecution. Over 200,000 people in England and Wales last year were given cautions, including some for violent and sexual offences. Under the new proposals, victims would be given a right of appeal if their perpetrator is only cautioned. Magistrates would also be able to scrutinise on-the-spot fines, warnings for cannabis possession and would sentence more criminals themselves rather than send them to Crown Court.

Predicting crime 'cut Medway street violence by 6%'

A four month trial of predictive policing pioneered in Medway. The system uses computer analysis of human behaviour and historic crime data to predict crime 'hotspots' to deploy police officers.

Young people and domestic violence

Women's Aid is inviting young people to put their questions and suggestions about domestic violence to government, schools, police and social services.

Criminal Justice Alliance

Prosecuting Young Adults. Within Criminal Justice policy there has been an increasing recognition of the role of maturity as a factor in the commission of crimes, particularly for the young adult group, and there is a new interest in how a more rigorous and effective approach for young adults in the transition to adulthood (aged between 16 and 24) can be delivered.

The Government has announced plans for five more police forces to pilot the 'street triage' mental health scheme, in which mental health nurses accompany police officers on call-outs. The scheme, currently on trial in two police forces, aims to improve the way people with mental health problems are treated during emergencies (BBC Online).

New generation tagging contract boosts British economy

New satellite technology that will help track the movement of offenders in the community is set to be delivered by two British businesses.

Horizon Scanning

Horizon scanning is regarded as a useful tool for strategic decision making. Its findings can be used to inform policy, improve operational preparedness or resilience, develop robust strategies and decrease risk exposure. In January 2013, the Cabinet Office published a review of cross-government horizon scanning, led by the Chairman of the Joint Intelligence Committee, Jon Day. The Day Review concluded that “the UK does not lack the resources to conduct horizon scanning, but needs to improve upon and formalise the structures for directing work and making use of the end product”. The Science and Technology Committee has agreed to hold an inquiry into horizon scanning in Government, and seeks written submissions on the following matters:

- How do Government departments make use of horizon scanning?
- How effective is horizon scanning in Government? Do Ministers and senior officials consider horizon scanning outputs appropriately?
- What changes could be made to improve existing horizon scanning activity? Will the recommendations made in Jon Day’s review of cross-government horizon scanning capability address current shortcomings? What progress has been made implementing these?
- How effective is the Government at responding to policy or regulatory challenges presented by new technologies?

Day of international cooperation pays dividends in Kent

An international day of action mounted last week to showcase predictive policing in Kent has led to at least 16 arrests for a range of offences.
