

"Listening to your experiences is vital for me to represent your views on how policing works and where it needs to improve. Your views have already helped me to roll out specific, targeted crime prevention strategies alongside key partners".

LISTENING TO YOU

When planning my annual budget, I am greatly influenced by your opinions and what you would pay for the police element of the council tax. Canvassing your views enabled me to continue recruiting more officers and make savings in other areas such as buildings.

My Deputy Chris Cutland and I attend many local events and meetings to talk with residents about their concerns. These conversations, together with our surveys, allow me to adjust my Police and Crime Plan at any time to reflect changing situations or needs.

As a result of your feedback I have:

- Continued investment in local policing and neighbourhoods
- Tackled alcohol related harm with partners
- Invested in victims and domestic abuse services
- Saved money through collaboration with other forces, partners and reduced my office costs
- Engagement and research relating to BME (black and minority ethnic) relationships with the police

You can find further information about how I spend my time and the work I am doing on your behalf in my annual report, which is available via the website or through my office.

While I am totally answerable to you, the public, my work is also closely scrutinised by the Police and Crime Panel by whom I am held to account. Meetings of the panel, and my own Strategic Resources and Performance meetings with senior officers from Nottinghamshire Police, are open to the public.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE'S POLICE AND CRIME COMMISSIONER

Ever since his election in November 2012, Paddy Tipping has turned talk into action to help keep you safe from crime.

As the People's Commissioner his job is to represent the public and hold the police to account on your behalf. To help him do this he appointed Chris Cutland, prominent campaigner against domestic abuse and leading female rights advocate, as his Deputy.

The Commissioner does not run the police force - operational policing is the job of the Chief Constable.

"My role involves listening closely to what you and your communities say. What you tell me helps me to make positive decisions that help our Force to police our City, towns and villages more effectively. I am here to speak up for you, to champion victims of crime, and make your views count."

MY JOB

As Commissioner, my main aim is to ensure that policing across the county and city is efficient, effective and meets your needs and expectations.

My election pledges remain an important part of achieving this, as reflected in my continuing recruitment of more bobbies on the beat and ongoing focus on the reduction of anti-social behaviour.

My responsibilities include:

- Setting the strategic priorities for Nottinghamshire Police
- Putting the needs of victims first, ensuring appropriate support is available.
- Consulting local people and victims, listening to their views and taking action in response
- Setting a budget that will fund both local and national priorities
- Monitoring the performance of the Force
- Working with partner agencies to tackle crime and reoffending
- Appointing (and if necessary dismissing) the Chief Constable
- Funding a wide range of services from Community Safety and victims' organisations
- Making sure that Police and Community Safety Services deliver value for money
- Publishing a Police and Crime Plan and Annual Report

Overall, my job involves working with the Chief Constable and other partners to deliver and improve policing performance, cut crime and anti-social behaviour, and continue to build trust and confidence in policing. I also have to take into account national and cross-border policing challenges including terrorism, civil emergencies, cyber-crime and organised crime.

MY DEPUTY COMMISSIONER'S ROLE

Deputy Police and Crime Commissioner Chris Cutland supports me in the work I do and deputises for me in a number of areas to which she brings particular and invaluable expertise. A former Chief Executive of Women's Aid Integrated Services in Nottingham, Chris Cutland helps me to give extra priority and support to domestic violence victims and crimes against girls and women.

As Deputy, she has been appointed specialist lead for domestic violence-related issues for the county. She leads on women's rights, and is the county's lead for oversight of Victims' Services. It is also her responsibility to lead for me on Complaints and Professionals Standards relating to the Force.

Her other roles include leading on equality matters, volunteers such as cadets and Specials, and the Independent Custody Visiting and Animal Welfare Schemes. She also oversees the Mystery Shoppers Volunteers who help monitor customer service quality in policing.
